What's cyberbullying?

Cyberbullying, which is defined as the use of information technology to harm or harass someone in a deliberate, repeated and hostile manner, is an international issue for schools, young people and their families.

A study that was recently conducted by Turkish National Statistics Institute with the participation of 13–18 year old students

IN TURKEY - According to the Turkish National Statistics Institute:

BOYS ♂

■ HAVE BEEN BULLIED - 30% ■ HAVEN'T BEEN BULLIED - 70%

GIRLS ♀

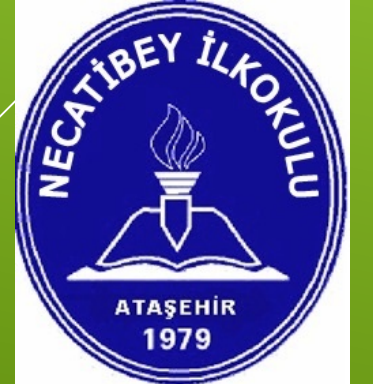

■ HAVE BEEN BULLIED- 35% ■ HAVEN'T BEEN BULLIED - 65%

IN NECATİBEY PRIMARY SCHOOL:

Contrary to the worldwide results:

☺ Most of our students said that they haven't been bullied on the internet.

TWO MAIN REASONS:

1. Most of our students are less inclined to use the internet than those with lower levels of family income or education. Living in low income family may be associated with lower levels of device use, internet use at particular locations, and participation in online activities.

2. Moreover our school is a small primary school environment, signs of bullying may be more evident as teachers and school counselors are generally more aware of what's changing in students' actions and behavior.

- Threats, gossip, insults, altering photos in an offensive way and sharing photos or videos without the person's consent via mobile phones or the internet are the most-encountered types of cyberbullying in Turkey.

our main objective is to learn:

- Children's understanding, knowledge and/or perception of cyberbullying
- Cyberbullying behaviors, characteristics of victims and how it affects them
- The prevalence of cyberbullying ascertained through children's reporting of
 - 1. Cyberbullying experiences as a cybervictim, cyberbully, bystander or no cyberbullying experiences
 - 2. The perceived prevalence of cyberbullying, reporting practices, cyberbullying opinion and solutions
- Cyberbullying impacts as perceived effects and actual effects of cyberbullying on self and others.
